PULPIT PARAGRAPHS.—Owing to the large attendance at Rev. Wilding's revival services at the North Street M. E. Church, the meetings are now held in the auditorium of the church. Services will be held in this church every night this week.

Rev. Thompson a Life and the State University, delivered his lecture on Macaulay' at the Zane Street M. E. Church on Saturday evening, before a good audience.

He said he would be quite the minds of the state of the st Mr. Thompson opened by stating that he wanted to talk to his audience in a familiar and earnest way about a pure Eaglishman. He said he would be quite satisfied if he could place before the minds of his hearers a picture of Macaulay's life. It is well worth our study. It is almost free from the tragic element. He was not an eager, restless, warring iconoclast; he haid claim to no superior sanctity; he founded no new school in philosophy; he led no armies to victory; he was simply a marvellously gifted Eaglishman, conscious of his vast powers. Too noble to prostitute them to any base purpose, too wise to sacrifice them to any temporary political advancement; never cringing to those above him, never patronizing to those above him, never patronizing to those below him; he was kind, oon-jiderate, uncervious and unseifish. He was a commanding genius, with-tender as a woman's; he had a will as unconquerable as a martyr's.

My aim is to narrate the life and describe the man. The signs of heredity would show that Thomas Babington Macaulay was well born on his father's side. He was of Scotch origin, and inherited their directness of purpose, and many other sirtues. Zachariah Macaulay, his father, was an earnest philanthropist and slavery reformer, ruled by the highest moral and religious principles, and was the familiar friend of Wiloerforce, Granville Sharp and others.
His mother was a beautiful young Quakeress, at one time the tutor of Haunah Moore.

He very early gave promise of his for THE HOBS-PANTHER SUIT.—Our readers will remember that in the spring of 1874 an accident occurred at the Bellaire bridge by which the model barge La Belle, belonging to the Wheeling Towboat and Barge Company, with a load of iron ore, was wrecked against one of the piers of the bridge; also that at the same time, by a collision with the Hobbs, which had the barges in tow, a portion of the coal tow of the steamboat Panther was sunk. Ever since that time a cross suit for damages has been pending in the Courts at Cincinnati. It arose somewhat in this wise: Messrs. Miller, Nickle & Co., who owned the tow of coal in charge of the Panther, sued the Towboat and Barge Company for the loss of the coal, amounting to $4,353 45, and the Towboat and Barge Company sued the Panther for the loss of their barge and her carge of iron ore, amounting to $8,392 02. ture distinction. He was an unusually precocious child, and an untimely death was predicted for him by his mother. From the time that he was three years of age, he was an incessant reader, and his memory was already remarkable for its memory was already remained. At thirteen years of age he was reading Plutarch's Lives and Fenelon's Dialogues of the

The Court, Judge Swing presiding, rendered a decision on last Wednesday, giving judgment against the Wheeling Towboat & Barge Company for the amount of Miller, Nickle & Co's claim, $4,354 45, and dividing the claim of the Towboat & Barge Company against the Panther, amounting to $8,392 92, making the Hobbs liable for one-half and the Panther for the other half.

The ground of the decision seems to have been in the first case that although it was daylight and the Panther could see that the Hobbs was in trouble, yet the Hobbs should have given a signal of distress and failing to do so became liable for the damage ensuing; and in the second case that it being daylight the Panther could see that the Hobbs was in trouble and not withstanding time failure ther) ought to have backed and failing to do so she was equally at fault with the Hobbs and was therefore equally liable

He entered Parliament for the first time, in 1830, and so great was his auccèse then, that he was compared to Fox and Burke. He was afterward made a member of the Supreme Court of India, and spent three years there. After his return to England he was made Secretary of War. Had he devoted all his energies to politics, and entirely divorced himself from literature, he might easily have won'the leadership of his party, and the Premiership of England; in other words he might have been a thladstone.

In his hands, history is entertaining as well as instructive. Reading his pages we need but a small portion of his imagination to transport ourselves into English life two hundred years ago. Perhaps he has never been surpassed in the literary grace of his historical portraits. The men he writes abeut are living, planning, and scheming before our eyes. They are men of fleshand blood, strong passons, fierce rival-SKOWBALLING may be innocent enough as a pastime under proper conditions, but we noticed on Saturday that it was but we noticed on Saturday that it was carried to excess. Sleighs passing along, either with or without ladies in them, were indiscriminately snowballed; the balls, too, often were almost as hard as atone, being made of water-soaked snow, which was about equivalent to ice. It seemed to be the special delight of the snowballers to attack people from the country passing along in sleds and sleighs, and it was easy to be seen that they did not relish the sport. There was complaint from citizens even that the did, if such it might be called, was carried too far, and they expressed their opinion that it ought to be put a stop to by the police, particularly the snowballing of vehicles of any description. It is not only very annoying but dangerous.

After arriving there and assisting them out, Mr. Stephens attempted to turn the horses around, when they ran off, throwing him out and breaking his leg in a serious manner. Dr. Ford was called in and reduced the fracture. Mr. Stephens was brought to his home near Hamilton's foundry, where he is doing as well as could be expected. He is a heater in the Belmont Mill. I HAVE used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and found it the best cough remedy I ever tried.—W. P. Clarke, 920 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, November 27, 1875. REMEMBER the Uncle Tom Matinee on Wednesday. There is no play so popu-lar with the young folks as Uncle Tom.

The late train on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will be held over on Tuesday and Wednesday nights to accommodate the people of Benwood, Bellaire, etc., who desire to witness the opening of Washington Hall, and the reconstructed version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The troupe is the largest and finest that has ever visited Wheeling.

Mack warns all disorderly parties to keep away from his theatre, and says he will have every one found creating dis-order arrested.

ONE of the pleasantest recollections of the Centennial trip to Philadelphia thou-sands of people will connect with their pleasant quarters and agreeable treat-ment at the Colonade Hotel.

MACK says he means business, and will not run anything but a respectacle and orderly house.

A GENTLE HINT.—In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the deaths resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syrup kept about your home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption, Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful as your druggist will tell you. German Syrup is now sold in every town and village on this continent. Sample bottles for trial, 10c; regular size, 76c. eodaw. UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.—There is every
